So, it was with great appreciation that moments ago I closed the cover on this wonderful little work. J.B. Phillips wrote Your God is Too Small in 1952 yet it remains imminently quotable for those grappling with 21st century objections to faith. His adept way of addressing the closed universe of modern thinking is striking for a number of reasons.

Many years ago J. B.
Phillips wrote an excellent book titled Your God Is Too Small. The thesis of the book was that there are things we consider impossible because we think we are too small, or too weak, or too poor. The problem with that line of thinking is that we are not figuring God into the equation. That thinking is still alive.

In general, Phillips argues that we think small. We make God out to be a dictator or an absentee or cruel or simply remade in our own image and subsequently flawed in one way or another. But that's on us, not on Him. We project those fallacies onto Him, even though time and again He shows us that's not His character.
